In Senate.--December 16, 1845.

REMARKS OF MR. BERRIEN, OF GEORGIA, ON MR. CASS'S RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. President, the Senator who has just taken his seat has given expression to the feelings of one portion of the American people on the subject of his debate. Happily, sir, there is another prevailing elsewhere within the limits of this Confederacy, I desire to express that feeling to the Senate and to the country. I am here as one of the Representatives of a people who are as sensitive to the national honor, as resolute in the assertion and maintenance of our national rights, and (although their position would expose them to peculiar hazards) as prompt to encounter whatever of peril or of calamity the vindication of that honor and of those rights may demand, as any who may more vauntingly proclaim their devotion. I desire, therefore, sir, before this debate closes to say a word in relation to the subject of it.

I agree with senators on both sides of the Chamber that these resolutions, considered in themselves are entirely harmless—the inoffensive exercise of a right which belongs to every Government, that of inquiring at all times into the state and condition of its means of defence. If, therefore, it had pleased the Senator from Michigan to have presented them unaccompanied by the remarks with which he introduced them, although I would even then have been entirely sensible of the irregularity of presenting them before our committees were appointed, before the Senate was organized and had the means of making the inquiries which they propose, yet this irregularity would have been comparitively unimportant, and from respect to the wishes of the Senator might have been overlooked. It did not please him so to present his resolutions. On the contrary, he availed himself of the occasion to bring to the consideration of the Senate our existing relations with Great Britain, and to open at once this extraordinary and exciting debate. He is not unmindful, but perfectly aware, of the importance which will be attached to declarations such as he has made and to opinions such as he has expressed, originating in this Chamber, for he has called our attention to a similar exhibition in the British House of Commons, and has urged it upon us as evidence of the feeling of the British people.

With a full view, therefore, of the effect produced on the public mind in its present state of excitement and apprehensiveness, the honorable Senator has indulged in a strain of denunciation against the arrogance of Great Britain, her lust of dominion, and the wrongs she has inflicted, and is preparing to inflict upon us, (the force of which cannot but be felt, coming as it does from one heretofore distinguished as a soldier and diplomatist, and now occupying a prominent position in this chamber,) which to all practical purposes he might as well have prefixed to his resolutions as a preamble before he submitted them to the Senate for their adoption. He has left no room for conjecture as to the motive which prompted them; on the contrary, he has given them a fixed and definite application. It was a public motive, springing from our relations with Great Britain, and, if his views of these relations be correct, it is a meritorious motive.

The honorable Senator does not wish to disturb the peace of the country. His desire is merely to provide for its security. Concurring with him in these views, as every Senator will do, it is then a mere question of expediency and that question is whether at the time, and under the circumstances it was expedient to present these resolutions and to open the discussion which the Senator has invited. by the remarks with which he has accompanied them. I do not think it necessary to qualify myself to enter upon such a discussion by professions of patriotism, or by deprecating the imputation of the want of it. I proceed, therefore, to state my views of these resolutions with reference to the time and circumstances of their presentment and also in relation to some of the topics which have been discussed.

I have already said that I would under any circumstances have considered the presentment of these resolutions as irregular, as a departure from the established usage of the Senate, and indeed of every Legislative body. I say now that this departure from habitual usage, having its foundation in propriety, was not required by any peculiar exigency. It would, however, be comparitively unimportant, but for other considerations which are connected with it.

The President is required by the Constitution to give information to Congress from time to time of the state of the nation, and to recommend such measures as he may deem necessary. In the performance of this duty, he has given us detailed information concerning our relations with Great Britain, and has recommended to us such measures as he thinks the occasion demands; and what is then our duty? Unquestionably it is to consider in the usual and accustomed mode the information which thus communicated. And what is that mode?—certainly it is to refer the different subjects so communicated to the respective committees, and await their reports, before discussing them on their merits, or entering into any inquiries concerning them. Mr. President, it is wise at all times to adhere to established rules of proceeding. Ours have been devised by the wisdom of those who have gone before us, and have been ratified and confirmed by our own experience of their fitness. Why should we depart from them on this occasion? Why precipitate ourselves into discussion and action on the grave and exciting questions presented by the message, without those aids to which we are accustomed even on the most unimportant matters? What can we hope to gain by this precipitancy? The information sought for by the resolutions, not already communicated to Congress, can speedily obtained at the different Departments. Are we alarmed by the crisis, and does the presence of the danger startle us from our propriety? Do we hope to intimidate our adversary by the ostentatious display of our ample means of defence? I submit, then, to the honorable Senator from Michigan, whether it would not have been more discreet, more prudent, more consistent with our own dignity, not to have precipitated ourselves into this inquiry and discussion, but to have proceeded calmly and steadily, in the accustomed mode of action in this chamber, to have examined the subject as presented in the message of the President, and then to have adopted such measures as the occasion required.

Mr. President, the precipitancy into which we have been hurried would seem to me to be peculiarly unwise, looking to the state of the negotiation. I am not disposed to exercise the caution of Senator from Massachusetts on this subject.—On the contrary, I have no hesitation to declare, according to the correspondence as it has been communicated to us, that this negotiation cannot, in my judgment, be considered as having been terminated, either by our own Government, or that of Great Britain. If the language of these diplomatic agents is to be understood according to the ordinary rules of interpretation, this position is undoubtedly true.

The negotiation commenced in the spirit of compromise. The very first protocol recognizes this as its basis. Now what is compromise but the settlement of mutual and conflicting claims?—What does it admit? What does it forbid? It admits that each of the negotiating party have a right matter of the controversy. It forbids the assertion of an exclusive right in either. He who claims to be lord of all, and intends to adhere to his claim, has nothing to compromise. He may make a portion of his right, but that is a gratuitous act, not a compromise.

How we entered into this negotiation on this ground basis, with this concession recorded in the protocol of the proceedings, that Great Britain as well as ourselves had claims to this territory which it was the object of the negotiation to adjust by compromise. We re-affirmed this when we submitted the proposal to establish the 49th parallel as the boundary between us. We did not ask, Great Britain did not ask, the gratuitous surrender of any portion of the territory, which had heretofore belonged exclusively to the party surrendering. No; the proposal by Great Britain, as well as that made by ourselves, was an offer to establish by compromise a boundary line between us, which should thereafter mark the limits of our respective claims, and would, if either had been accepted, have been followed by a relinquishment of the United States and Great Britain, each to the other, of their respective claims to the portion thus assigned to that other. Well, these offers have been mutually rejected; but what then? The negotiation is still open on its original basis. The American proposal was withdrawn. That, I agree, if the withdrawal had been naked and unexplained, might have been a source of embarrassment; but it was not so. The American Secretary, acting under the immediate direction of the President, closes that note with the expression of a hope that the controversy may still be adjusted without disturbing the peace or interrupting the harmony now happily subsisting between the two nations. How was this to be accomplished; how could such a hope be entertained; how, without insincerity, could it have been expressed, unless with the purpose of continuing the negotiation in the same spirit of compromise in which it was commenced?—The negotiation, I apprehend, is therefore still open. There is necessarily a pause in the proceeding. The proposals authorized by the two Governments have been mutually offered and rejected. Further instructions must therefore be given to the negotiators; but these instructions must be framed with a recollection of the concession already mutually given that each party has rights in the subject-matter in controversy. Is it wise, is it becoming, in this delicate state of negotiation, thus precipitately to sound the alarm, by an excited debate in the Senate of the United States?

That the President still looks to the peaceful adjustment of this controversy, is obvious, I think, from his message, and this not merely from the absence of any suggestion of the propriety of increasing our means of defence or of aggression, but from the caution which is manifested in the measures which he does recommend. The recommendation to extend our laws over this territory for the protection of our own citizens, and to secure the safety of emigrants by a chain of posts, are both of a peaceful character. The proposal to terminate the existing convention, by giving the notice which it requires, may ultimately, if no adjustment should be made intermediately, eventuate in collision between the two countries. The omission to recommend the issuing of grants to the settlers is obviously dictated by a spirit of peace.

On this subject of giving notice I desire to say a word. When the Oregon question was heretofore before the Senate, on a bill containing such provisions as those to which I have just referred, with pleasure the opinion expressed by a distinguished Senator, not now in this chamber, but recently recalled from his retirement by the almost unanimous voice of the Legislature of his State. That opinion affirmed the advantage to us of preserving the actual condition of things in relation to this territory, and "a masterly inactivity" as the means of the ultimate and peaceful acquisition of it. I concurred in that opinion then; I continue to entertain it now. Perhaps Great Britain, admonished by the manifestation of popular feeling on this subject, and especially by the debates in this Chamber, may feel that her interests require a prompt decision of this controversy. If so, what we have lost by our impatience we must regain by firm and united action. If, unhappily, in the course of events, we are driven to the last arbitrament of nations, all diversities of opinion here will cease.

But, having said this, I desire to say further, that I should very much prefer that the notice for the termination of the convention should come from the British Government rather than our own. Unless the prospect of adjusting this controversy by negotiation should brighten, I believe that this notice will be given by that Government, from a conviction that delay will increase her difficulty and strengthen our claim; and if so given, it will have the double effect of placing us in a more favorable position before the nations of the world, and of uniting and animating the American people in the struggle which may ensue.

Mr. President, the people of the United States are looking with intense anxiety to the action of Congress, and more especially of this branch of the National Legislature, on this exciting subject. Representing a portion of that people who are particularly exposed to the calamities of war, I desire to say that in the utmost effort of my imagination I cannot discerne the possibility of such a result to this controversy. National honor! Why, national honor consists in the fulfilment of National rights—national interests! Why, what are the multiplied, diversified and interests of twenty millions of people which must jeopard it in such a contest? And then this war, unless it be one of extermination, must at last be terminated by treaty.

The Senator from Michigan tells us that a territory extending over seven degrees of latitude is at stake. God of mercy! and what is to be placed in the opposite scale, if we are to enter into a contest like this? But is it a contest for such an extent of territory? Will any one read attentively the voluminous correspondence of the various negotiations, and fail to percieve, whatever may have been the verbal strife, that the real bone of contention is the outlet to the Pacific, the navigation of the Columbia river? Is this a question which, in this age of civilization, in this Christian age, ought to embroil two nations in war? Ay, but we have a principle to mainthin. We cannot yield to a foreign nation the right of navigating a river which flows through our territory. And Great Britain has a principle to maintain.

She will not agree that her subjects shall be cut off from their communication with the Pacific.—Does the fact exist which is to call these conflicting principles into exercise? Is the Columbia navigable from the point where the 49th parallel strikes its northern branch? I do not so understand it; I do not hear any Senator assert that it is. What, then, is it for this phantom of the imagination; this right which cannot be exercised; which does not exist; which cannot therefore be granted, and cannot be refused,—is it for such a chimera that these two nations are to draw the sword. Is it for this that the people of the United States and of Great Britain, living in peace and harmony, mutually dependent on each other for many of the comforts and conveniences of life; springing from a common ancestry; speaking the same language; worshiping the same God; is it for this that such a people are to be involved in all the horrors of war?

Sir, I do not believe it. The Senate does not believe it, . The country will not believe it. It cannot be, unless the vengeance of an offended Deity shall first madden those whom in the councels of his providence he has doomed to destruction.

Mr. President, this controversy may be fomented. The people of two great nations may be wrought up to madness, by mutual denunciations, such as we have heard and read, aided as they will be by the violence and the virulence of the press; but, be he Englishman or American, who shall incur the fearful responsibility of involving these two nations in war in a controversy like this, without having first exhausted every means at his command for its peaceful adjustment, may gain to himself immortality, but it will be that species of immortality which waits upon the memory of Erostratus.

From the New Orleans Tropic.

A most Impressive Lesson.

The annals of crime have so often furnished themes of deep and melancholy interest, that the public heart demands something more than ordinary recitals to accelerate its wonted palpitations. The pen of the novelist and poet, the pencil of the artist, the tongue of the civilian and divine, have all contributed, in painful nomenclature, in soul harrowing groupings, or in the terrible eloquence of uncontrolled emotions, to deaden by repetition that exquisite sensibility which leads to sober, agonizing, enduring reflections and ultimately to great moral results. The criminal calendar is, to a certain extent consulted more for the gratification of an idle curiosity than for any higher purpose; and the consequence is an impression effaceable, in most instances, simultaneously with the perusal. Once in a great while, however, an out break from the paths of rectitude occurs under circumstances too awful to pass without convulsing to its very centre the entire community where it happens, and inflicting upon the national mind, as the dreadful story makes its way from city to city and from State to State, a shock that, for a time at least, produces the most wholesome influences throughout the land. When such an event takes place, it becomes the duty of the press to set forth the facts developed, and accompany the same with fitting comments and solemn admonition. Such is the duty of the New Orleans press at this time.

The Hon. Rice Garland has been for years distinguished as one of the intellectually gifted citizens of Louisiana. The proprietor of what may be called an earthly paradise in this sunny clime, a plantation in Opelousas, with a lovely and interesting family to heighten its charms, he possessed in himself, independent of all worldly distinction, the elements of the purest happiness. The predilections of his fellow-citizens, however, centered upon him, and induced his withdrawel from the harmonizing influences of domestic life to become an actor in the turbulent scenes of political strife. His career opened upon him with unusual brilliancy, and promised a realization of his fondest hopes. He was the favorite of an intelligent and generous-hearted constituency, and his elevation to a seat in the council of the nation attested the general confidence in his political integrity, while his fidelity at Washington to the interests of his State came back among the people as an evidence that this confidence was not misplaced. From Congress, he was transferred to a seat on the Supreme Bench of Louisiana, where, as an industrious, investigating, learned jurist, he might have secured the laurels that should have grown greener and greener in his passage again from public life to the serene enjoyments of a good old age at home. Alas, that the hopes of family, friends, constituents, were destined, in the very crisis of their realization, to be blasted. Judge Garland has fallen from his high estate, and the Bench, which he might have honored, has been dishonored in his fall!

Virtue, that should have cast its radiant beauties over and around a Bar of which Louisiana is justly proud, yielded to the tempter, and crime gained a heart that should have been pure and happy, but which now is cold, and desolate, and in despair! Young men, read the lesson, and ponder upon it thoughtfully! Heed well its heart-rending moral, and remember that youth and middle age may pass and yet leave you a prey to the fiend of crime!

The history of Judge Garland's downfall is pretty well known in this community. Reports prejudicial to his character have been whispered in private circles for some time. The general indisposition to credit them only proves how strong a hold he had on public confidence. Gradually, these reports spread, and, a day or two previous to the session of the Court, they had assumed something like a tangible shape. People began to speak freely of what yet was all doubt. The crisis approached. The Chief Justice and his associates, with a single exception, took their seats. After a while, the other, Judge Garland, appeared, when those on the Bench retired, the Court having been peremptorily adjourned. The press then broke the matter for the first time to the universal ear. Yet incredulity held back. Mere suspicion was deemed an inadequte cause for the summary procedure of the Chief Justice. The suspected criminal appeared the next day, indicating, by his firm and confident manner, the most perfect innocence. He addressed the Bar in the words of an injured man. His asseverations of guiltlessness, his denunciations of the falsehoods and slanders which he said were afloat, were enough to enlist the sympathies of nearly all, and to render more than probable his statements. Thus was the public mind kept in a state of painful doubt until Wednesday, when a preliminary investigation took place at the instance, we believe, of Judge Martin, before Judge Maurian, assisted by Judge Collins. The Attorney General and District Attorney were present, as were also Mr. Prentiss and some other members of the Bar. The only witnesses examined were J. K. Smith and John McDonogh, Esq. Their testimony was astounding, and, so far as we can learn, to most minds conclusive of Judge Garland's guilt. The facts elicited are these: Mr. Smith, who is a broker, in October discounted a note for $6,250, signed by John McDonogh and endorsed by Rice Garland.

The proceeds were paid to Maj. Baird, who, after deducting the amount due him, paid over the balance to Judge Garland. Shortly after, Smith told McDonogh that he held his note. The latter replied, that he had no such note out; but, on seeing it, he recognized his signature, and remarked that the body of the note must have been written over his name by the abstraction of writing, and refused to pay it. This was the substance of Mr. Smith's evidence. That of Mr. McDonogh was not only confirmatory of it, but disclosed more in detail Judge Garland's action in the matter. It appears that Mr. McDonogh is in the habit of sending presents of fruit, pamphlets, &c., to the Judges, accompanied by a friendly note. He had sent such presents and notes to Judge Garland on two or three occasions. The contents of one of these notes, Judge G. must have, by some chemical process, obliterated, preserving only the signature, and thus fabricating the bill in question. After Mr. Smith had advised Mr. McDonogh that he held such a note, and the latter had returned to his residence across the river, Judge Garland made his appearance there, pale haggard, and exhibiting in his features and manners evidences of the most utter dispair, and implored Mr. McDonogh to save him, his wife and his children, by not exposing the matter. Prompted by feelings of pity, Mr. McDonogh the next day took up the forged note, giving Mr. Smith his own for the balance, over, about $3,000 which Judge G. had refunded. He destroyed the note thus taken up in Judge G.'s presence. We ought to state, as an important part of Mr. McDonogh's testimony, that when Mr. Smith showed him the forged note, it was discolored and cob-web like, and separated in several places when handled.

Such is the tale of crime, by which we are forced to believe, from the sworn statements of Mr. McDonogh, corroborated not only by Mr Smith's evidence, but by the former gentleman's well known way of doing business, that Judge Garland has actually committed the terrible act laid to his charge. Such would seem to be the opinion of the Attorney General and the Examining Judges, as a warrant was immediately issued for Judge G.'s arrest.

The sequel of the story, so far as developed at this hour of writing, accords with what might have been expected in a man of keen susceptibilities suddenly exposed to the condemnation of a horror stricken community.—Mr. McDonogh had promised all, and done all in his power, even at the risk of subjecting himself to the charge of compounding a felony, to save the forger of his name from exposure, disgrace and ruin. But the attempt, prompted by the noblest feelings of man's nature, failed. The argus-eyed ministers of justice prevailed over the efforts of humanity, and the "damning deed" was forced before the tribunal of law. We are informed that Judge G. met Mr. McDonough on his way to the Parish Court. On learning from the latter, that, if put on oath, he would be compelled to disclose the whole truth, Judge G. in a fit of despair, proceeded to the river and plunged in, with a view, as is inferred, to close his ill-fated career, by suicide. He was prevented, however, from accomplishing his purpose, and is yet living, to meet such punishment as the law, which has thus been offended in the person of one of its learned expounders, may inflict. Up to this hour, he has not been arrested. His whereabouts are involved in impenetrable mystery.

Daily Commercial Journal.

ROBERT M. RIDDLE, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

THURSDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 25.

TERMS:

DAILY PAPER—Five Dollars per annum, to present subscribers. ☞ On the first of January, our terms for the Daily paper will be slightly altered.
TRI-WEEKLY—Three Dollars per annum.
WEEKLY—Two Dollars per annum, in advance.

The Gazette and Journal.

When we made an attack upon the Gazette in our paper of Tuesday, we copied from that sheet, its whole article which was the immediate provocation. That course should deprive the Gazette of its usual plea of "unprovoked," "mean" and "contemptible" hostility. But the editor's reply is characteristic. He charges that our article contains "many falsehoods," and proceeds, as he calls it, to answer "one or two of them." It is easy for any man to cry out against his antagonist "falsehood," "falsehood," but among gentlemen, it is always expected that no such imputation shall be indulged until truth and self respect demand it, certainly, not until it can be triumphantly sustained. The editor of the Gazette has not deported himself according to this rule, and we shall hold him responsible to it. Until he surrenders pretensions to decency, he has no right to charge falsehood without the proofs; and yet, he impeaches our veracity without at all vindicating his own. So we repeat our charges, and we shall at our leisure establish them.

Accident to Bishop Potter.

The Philadelphia U. S. Gazette says:—We learn that a serious accident befel the Rt. Rev. Bishop Potter, yesterday, by which one of his legs was broken. We trust that surgical skill will restore the fractured limb to usefulness, and that no danger may result from the occurrence, to the health of this eminent prelate.

The Acadia.

While off Seal Island, on the 17th inst., at 10 o'clock, the Acadia passed the steamship Cambria, from Boston for Halifax and Liverpool. In consequence of the thick fog, the Acadia went ashore, in coming on the coast, but fortunately struck on a soft bottom, and suffered not the slightest injury, although the accident delayed her arrival several hours. The rumor, therefore, relative to the Cambria having been lost is, doubtless incorrect.

Auction Sale.

Don't forget the Auction sale of Messrs. Jacob & Drucker, advertised for to-morrow night. The goods are of excellent quality, and will be sold at extremely low rates. P. M'Kenna is the auctioneer. Sale to take place at the "golden hive."

Several good 'uns.

The following items, are from the pen of GREEN of the Boston Post. They are irresistibly droll.—By the way we should like to see a little more of the afore named perpetrator, for barring his invetterate democracy. We think he must be a marvellously clever fellow. Please send on the Post.

Why are turkeys "about this time" like Fashion in the race with Peytona. Because they can't keep a-head.

Why is a person in possession of a secret like at wreck at sea? Because he is obliged to undergo frequent pumping.

Why was an evening last week, on which so many horses were frightened in Tremont Row like a tailor? Because it was a "(k) night of shears."

Why is the advice of a man to his son Richard, who is too fond of wine, like a well known book? It is "Dick-shun-(sh)-erry," (dictionary.)

Why is a drunkard unlike a doctor? Because he loses by treating.

Why are chameleons like dandies? Because they often change their colors, (collars.)

Why are "green countrymen" like a certain antiquated fashion for coat? Because they swallow tales, (tails.)

Beaver Post Office.

The Beaver Argus says: The long threatened, long looked for change in the Beaver Post Office, has at last been made—a commission having arrived on Saturday last for Gen. Carter! It has been conceeded that Mr. Lyon has been a faithful and attentive officer in a remarkable degree, and that no excuse except a political one can be given for his removal; and either branch of the opposition here would have much preferred his continuance to the appointment of one not of their particular clique, but the selection of Gen. Carter by the head of the Department, was altogether unexpected from the efforts that prominent men here were understood to have made against him. It is a signal triumph of the "young Democracy" over the "Old Hunkers," and if anything could reconcile us to the change, it would be the mortification and disappointment manifested in the countenances of those who here give direction to the affairs of Locofocoism. Some secret but powerful influences must have been at work to defeat them.

☞ It is known that Mr. Bright was elected Senator to Congress from Indiana. His party had a majority of one in the State Senate, of which he was President. His election and acceptance of office, made a tie between the parties. Since then they have been trying to elect a President—but after seventy ballotings that body still remains without a head.

The Mayoralty.

The Whig and Antimasonic City Convention met on Wednesday morning, and was organized by appointing Joshua Hanna chairman, Robert McKnight and Anthony Dravo, Jr., Secretaries.

The list of Delegates being called, on motion, William J. Howard was unanimously nominated candidate for Mayor.

On motion of J. W. Lewis,

Resolved, That no name be presented to this to this Convention for any nomination, unless the member so presenting will pledge himself in the name of the individual presented, that he will submit his claims to this Convention and acquiesce in its nomination. Carried.

BALLOTS.—FIRST.	SECOND.	THIRD.
Wm. Chapman, 12	13	17
Thos. Perkins, 16	nominated,
E. F. Pratt, 13	11	11
Jas. Dripps, 4	—	—
Chas. Craig, 14	6	2
Jno. Patterson, —	—	—
Saml. Cooper, 1	—	—

Whereupon, Thos. Perkins and William Chapman were declared duly nominted.

On motion, Jas. A. Hutchinson, W. A. Hill, and Anthony Dravo, Jr., were unanimously nominated for Auditors.

The following Committee were appointed to inform Mr. Howard of his nomination for re-election, viz: John Caldwell, A. H. Miller, John Shipton, Robert McKnight, Daniel Taylor and J. M. Brush, to whom Mr. Howard replied, that he accepted the nomination, and, if elected, would endeavor to discharge his duty to the best of his abilty.

Resolved, That the members of this Convention be appointed a Committee of Vigilance to attend the polls on the day of election.

Resolved, The proceedings be published in all the Whig papers.

On motion, the Convention adjourned, sine die.

Our Book Table.

THE HEIRESS, A NOVEL.—by Miss Ellen Pickering—Cook, No. 85, Fourth street.

We have repeatedly expressed our opinion of Miss Pickering's novels—they are all well told stories, abounding in well conceived incidents and beautiful and natural description. The volume before us, appears to have been written in Miss P.'s happiest style.

JOAN, THE HEROIC MAIDEN—by Alexander Dumas.—Cook, No. 85, Fourth street.

A translation from Dumas, will be welcome to all who cannot read his racy and lively books, in the original. Mr. Ingersoll appears to have accomplished the task of translation in a pleasing, as well as correct manner.

While upon the subject, we will just inform our readers that our friend Cook is by no means, behind his neighbors in the way of preparation for the Holidays. Call and see for yourselves.

Effect of the News upon the Markets.

We copy the following from the Baltimore Sun, of toe 23d.—The news by the Acadia brought our dealers to a pause yesterday, and all dispositions to either buy or sell ceased until further advices from New York are received. A small sale of Virginia Flour, about equal to City Mills, was made yesterday morning at $5,50. Nothing done in Howard street or Baltimore City Mills flour. Holders generally are asking $5,50, without being able to effect sales. Offers of $5,25 and $5,37½ have been made for good mixed brands, but refused. The impression at present is, that prices may settle down to $5,25. No transaction in wheat or grain of any kind.

At New York, on Saturday, says the correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger, the effect of the news upon our markets generally has been totally prostrating. The private advices received here are much more discouraging, in a commercial point of view, than those received by the papers. They represent the accounts the potato crop to be greatly exaggerated, and that no hope need be entertained that the ports will be opened.

The Saturday afternoon edition of the Journal of Commerce says that the news made a blue day there. No cotton was sold, and holders of flour are pretty steady. They offered Genessee at $6, and there would have been some buyers at $5,75. Judging from these effects at New York, the price of flour here will have to come somewhat in the neighborhood of $5,50.

At Philadelphia, on Saturday, the foreign news put a stop to all business in flour in that market. Not a sale in either flour or grain was heard of.—All dealers, says the Ledger, admit that there must be a decline; but no one is disposed, or, perhaps, has not the oportunity, of fixing the point by a sale.

The Pennsylvanian of yesterday says: "In flour and wheat there has been an entire suspension of operations, and prices are too unsettled to admit of our giving anything like accurate quotations—a decline in flour is looked for of full 50c per bbl. We notice several sales of corn at full prices, and it is probable that the article will be but slightly affected by the late news, as prices were as high in Liverpool on the 4th inst. as on the 19th ult."

Accident to the U. S. steamer Princeton.

We have mentioned in another place, says the Baltimore American, the arrival of this vessel at Boston from Norfolk. Soon after coming to anchor in Boston harbor it was discovered that she was on fire in the ceiling below her boilers. The powder on board was immediately passed out and water applied by the crew; but the fire was not extinguished until several engines were brought alongside from the Charlestown Navy Yard. It is well that this accident did not occur at sea before the Princeton reached Boston, as in that case no one can tell what might have been the result. This occurrence has developed unpardonable culpability somewhere, either in the construction of the vessel or in her management. If it had its origin in neglect of duty on board, an investigation should be made at once. If, however, in the construction of the steamer measures were not taken to secure her against injury from fire, to which she must at all times be more or less exposed, the severest punishment should be visited upon those who have placed in peril the lives of so many of their fellows.

The Brothers of La Trappe.

The following curious and exact particulars of this ascetic order, were gleaned during a recent visit to the Monastery of La Trappe, whilom the Benardine Abbey, situated a short distance from the manufacturing town of Montague, Normandy:—"The monastery at present is composed of twenty-five fathers, comprising the most Reverend Louis Marie General of the Trappistes, and of fifty lay brothers. The establishment consists of an immense house, with extensive gardens, fish-ponds, stables, sheep-folds, cow-houses, &c., covering a space of several acres,, and nightly tenanted by sixteen horses, twenty-six cows, one bull, one hundred sheep, a magnificent ram, sixty pigs, and sows, and three hundred geese. The wheat upon the estate is very fine, almost every blade carrying eight ears. and the fruits and vegetables are of an extraordinary size. We remarked a water mill of English construction upon one of the ponds, which abounded with pike, carp, tench, roach, &c. Close to the convent is the Grotto of St. Bernard, the founder of the order, which was reestablished and reformed in 1603 by Abbe de Tance. The Fathers of La Trappe wear a white serge gown, with a hood attached to it, and the brothers brown ones. The frere-hotelier, or house steward, alone wears over a white robe a sort of black cap; he is the cicerone of the convent visiters. All the Trappistes have their heads shaved with the exception of a small tuft upon the crown. They wear a woolen shirt, which is changed every fifteen days, no trousers, merely linen drawers. summer and winter, shoes within doors, and heavy sabots for farm work. Each has his employment, turn about, from which the superior is not even exempted. When a brother commits a fault, he is condemned by the most reverend, according to its gravity, to eat upon the ground, or kneeling a certain time with his head bent to the earth. The youngest of the fathers is about twenty-five years old, and the most aged seventy years. They sleep without undressing upon a plank covered with a thin straw mattress and a woolen coverlet. No member of the order is permitted to have money in his possession. All that is received by the brother servitors from visiters, ought to be placed in the convent box.—When a father or brother dies, he is buried coffinless, in his religious dress, and placed in a sitting posture in the cemetery. The most rigorous silence is imposed upon all the Trappistes, and they communicate with each other by signs, like the deaf and dumb. From the 14th September to Easter, these devotees eat only one slight repast during the day; the remainder of the year they make two or three, according to the heaviness of the work. Winter and summer they retire to rest at eight, and rise at two in the morning. They then repair to the chapel until five, and from thence to the farm and the fields. Every kind of work is done in common, and without distinction of persons; all is for the good of the monastery, and each monk submits to the most servile labor in a spirit of penitence and humiliation,—Liverpool Standard.

☞ It is said that there were no printers in the days when the proverb which saith—"Labor while the day lasts, for the night cometh when no man can work," was written.

☞ There is a woman living within fifteen miles of Mobile, w'ho weighs 460 pounds, and enjoys good health—is mother of seven children, and is good tempered, fat, fair, forty, and four hundred!

☞ Fifty one pounds and twelve ounces of wool, have been this year sheared from five sheep in Rutland co., Vermont.

☞ The State of Georgia has appointed two Commissioners to confer with two others, to be appointed by the State of Florida, to ascertain and fix the line of boundary between the two States.

☞ The steamers run from N. Orleans to Galveston in fifty-one hours, easily.

☞ Professor Mitchell, of Cincinnati, is in Boston, and proposes delivering a course of lectures on astronomy.

☞ On the 11th ult., Mr. Anderson introduced a resolution into the House of Representatives of Tennessee, providing for the erection of a monument to Gen. Jackson, at or near Memphis; also for the procuring of a marble statue of the hero, to be placed in the Capitol.

WM. LARIMER, Jr., Exchange Broker, wishes us to state that he was not the witness in the case of Dimler against Bailey. Said witness is another person bearing the same name.

For the Commercial Journal.

I perceive my name placed in the list of Candidates for Common Council of the city of Allegheny —for this mark of favorable regard I am veay grateful, but must positively decline the honor.

AARON BIDWELL.

A Coachfull of Musicians and an Ale bibbing Driver.

"Capital ale here!" cried the driver, with increasing thickness of speech, as he drew up at an inn door. It was plain that the county of Essex, or at least that part of it that led from London to Liquorish, was peculiarly blessed with good ale; for at every inn the driver pulled up short, and proclaimed the heart-cheering news, "Capital ale here!" They were the only words he uttered from the time he had passed Shoreditch Church. Indeed, he seemed incapable of any other speech he seemed a sort of human parrot, reared and taught in a brewery endowed with no other syllables than "Capital ale here!" And still, as we have hinted, the words grew thicker and thicker in his mouth; too thick to drop from his lips, and so they rumbled in his jaws, whilst he cast a hopeless look about him, despairing to get them out; yet at every new hostelry making a sound that plainly meant, "Capital ale here!" Happily for him, according to his dim idea of felicity, he mumbled to quick interpreters. Hence, ere half the journey was accomplished, the driver seemed possessed of no more intelligence than a lump of reeking clay. He twiddled the rains between his fingers, and sometimes opened his eyes, that saw not the backs of the horses they seemed to look down upon. But the brutes were intelligent: they it appeared, knew the road; knew; it almost seemed so, the filthy imbecility of the driver; and so, with either a pity or contempt for the infirmity of human nature, they took care of their charioteer and his besotted passengers. True it is, St. Giles at times cast anxious looks about him; at times ventured to hint a doubt of the sobriety of the driver; whereupon he was called a fool, a coward; and a nincompoop by his companions, who considered his anxiety for the safety of his horses as an extreme piece of conceit, very offensive to the rest of the company. "You won't break sooner than any of us, will you?" asked the first fiddle. "Besides you're too drunk for any harm to come to you." St. Giles was sober as a water-god. "A good deal to drink; for if you knew any thing,——I say, that was a jolt, w'asn't it?" (for the vehicle had bounced so violently against a milstone that the shock half opened the eyes of the driver,)——"you'd know that a man who's properly drunk never comes to no sort of harm. There's a good angel always living in a bottle. You've only to empty it, and the angel takes care of you directly; sees you home, if it's ever so dark, and finds the key hole for you, if your hand is ever so unsteady. No: it's only your sneak up chaps that are afraid of the glass that get into trouble, break their bones, and catch rheumatiz, and all that. Whereas, if your skin's as full of liquor as a grape's full of juice, you may lay yourself down in a ditch like a little baby in his mother's lap, and wake in the morning for all the world like an opening lily."—The latter part of this sentence was scarcely heard by St. Giles, for the horses had suddenly burst into a gallop, the vehicle swayed to and fro, flew round a turning of the road, and, striking against the projecting roots of a huge tree threw all its human contents into a green-mantled pond on the other side of the narrow highway, one wheel rolling independently off. St. Giles, unhurt, but drenched to the skin, immediately set about rescuing his all but helpless companions. He tugged and tugged at the inert mass, the driver, and at length succeeded in dragging him from the pond, and setting him against a bank. He groaned, and his lips moved, and then he grunted, "Capital ale here!" The first clarionet scrambled from the pool, and, seizing his instrument that had rooled into the mud, immediately struck up "See the conquoring hero comes!" The first drum, inspired by the melodious courage of his companion, banged away at the pearchment; but, alas! for the fiddle: the bacchanal good angel, of which he had but a moment since so loudly vaunted, had forsaken him at his worst need, and that prime Cremona was rescued from water, mud, and duckweed with a broken arm. He was, however, unconscious of the injury; had, before he was well out of the pond, assured St. Giles that, if he would only have the kindness and goodfellowship to let him alone, he could sleep where he was like an angel,—Jerrold's Magazine.

Foreign Theatricals.

Mr. Wallack is at the Princess Theatre, London.

Miss Helen Faucit is at present at Edinburgh.

Mad'lle Fanny Elssler is at present at Rome, and engaged for the season at the Teatro Argentine.

Mr. and Miss Vandenhoff are about to bring out "Antigone" at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, early in the ensuing month.

Mr. Buckstone and Mr. McKay are engaged at the same place.

Mad'lle Taglioni has presented Petito with a splendid diamond brooch, in testimony of her admiration of this dancer's exertions in the ballet of the "Fille de Marbre."

The "Polka" is likely to be replaced this winter in Paris, by the new dance called "La Redowa," which M. Narin has in rehersal at the present moment by the dancing classes of the opera.

Mr. Wilson has given his Scottish entertainment lately at Manchester, and several other places in that neighborhood, with undiminished success; a proof that national melodies have an undying charm about them.

Madlle. Taglioni has arrived in Paris, on her way to Italy, after a farewell tour through various parts of England, Ireland and Scotland, by which she is said to have netted not less than £10,000—her lowest engagement, even at the smallest theatre, being 100 guineas per night.

The destruction of the Glasgow Theatre has thrown a number of actors out of employment.—The most prominent members of the company have been engaged by Mr. Sloan, of the Queen's Theatre, Manchester, for his forthcoming campaign. The proprietors of the theatre, anxious to sustain Mr. Sloan, in his spirited management, have determined upon making the most extensive and liberal alterations. The boxes, pit and gallery, as well as the stage, will be entirely rebuilt. A new suite of dress-rooms will be constructed. The pit, which will run under the boxes, will contain upwards of 900 persons. The theatre will re-open in March, with one of the best stock companies in the kingdom, and a succession of stars will appear during the season.

Douglass Jerrold has finished another comedy, the production of which, on the same stage, will take place soon.

A new play, the production of Brinsley Knowles, son of James Sheridan Knowles, has been brought out at the Haymarket, London, entitled the "Maiden Aunt." It is the first attempt of the son in the line which his father has succeeded so well. Its success, however, was doubtful.

A posthumous opera, by Weber, has, it is said, been discovered in London, where it has lain perdue since his death.

Clippings.

☞ A. J. Vanbuskirk, a clerk in the store of J. N. & T. H. Shelby & Co., New York, was arrested and imprisoned, on Saturday, on a charge of embezzlement to a heavy amount. He lived beyond the limit of his means, and probably his means of living will now be very uncomfortably limited.

☞ Three nice young men were shopped at Brooklyn, on Saturday, for indulging in the very funny recreation of filling a drunken negro's ear with powder and blowing it off.

Twenty-ninth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Washington, Dec. 22.

Correspondence from the Baltimore American.

U. S. SENATE.

Mr. Calhoun appeared in his seat to-day.

Mr. Webster presented several remonstrances against the annexation of Texas as a slave State.

Mr. Fairfield asked to be excused from serving on the Select Committee on French Claims prior to 1800, on the ground of having a personal interest in those Claims in consequence of the recent death of a relative of his wife. The request was granted. Mr. Webster was appointed.

Mr. Ashley, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported the joint resolution passed by the House for the admission of Texas, without amendment, with a recommendation that the same do pass.

Mr. Ashley stated that he was further instructed by the Committee to ask the immediate consideration of the resolution.

The resolution was read a second time and reported in the Senate. The question being on the third reading of the same.

Mr. Webster rose and said that he was quite aware that this resolution would pass. It had been passed by a large majority in the other House and it was quite well known that it would be passed by a large majoity of this body,

If any state formed from the free territories of the northwest should propose to be admitted into the Union with the same advantages over the South that the South now asks over the North by the proposed admission of Texas, he could not think that any Southern Senator would entertain the proposition for a moment. Mr. Webster objected to the Constitution of Texas, because it tied up the Legislature from ever, under any circumstances, and no matter in what situation the State might be placed, abolishing slavery within her borders, so long as it remains unaltered.

Mr. W. said he only performed an act of duty in giving expression to the firm, unalterable and unanimous opposition of those who had placed him here to the consumation of the act, and his determination to vote against the resolution.

Mr. Niles followed and gave the reasons which would lead him to vote for the resolution.

Mr. Huntingdon, of Conn., said he should vote against the resolution, and believed that in doing so he obeyed the wishes of the people of his State. He considered it both unconstitutional and inexpedient to pass this resolution. Mr. H. made a strong argument against admitting Texas with two representatives, without any knowledge that her population was sufficiently large to entitle her to such representation.

Mr. Bagby followed in a short speech, in which he endeavored to explain his former course on this question, and to show what his opinions now were.

Mr. Sevier demanded the ayes and noes. The resolution was then ordered to be read a third time.—Ayes 31, Noes 13.

The resolution then passed without a division.

ANNEXATION OF CUBA

Mr. Levy offered a resolution declaring the expediency of opening negotiations with the government of Spain for cession to this Country of the Island of Cuba, the inhabitants thereof consisting thereto. The resolution was laid over under the rule.

On motion of Mr. Benton the Committee on the Militia were instructed to inquire into the expediency of organizing a corps of Sappers and Miners.

Mr. Ashley, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported a bill to extend the laws of the U.S. over the State of Texas and to establish courts of justice therein.

The Senate then went into executive session, and soon after adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

A Report was laid before the House from Geo. N. Slacum, late Consul of the U. S., upon the subject of the American Slave trade.

After three ballots, the Rev. Mr. Milburn had 105 votes, and was declared to be duly elected.

Without transacting any other business, the House adjourned at an early hour.

A Valuable Cargo.

The new ship John R. Skiddy, Liverpool packet of the 11th inst. sailed with the following cargo:

16,700 bushels of barley, weighing		$35,000	lbs.
6,445 "	wheat, "	386,700	"
1,300 bbls.	flour, "	279,500	"
1,845 boxes	cheese, "	137,621	"
255 tierces	beef, "	102,000	"
57 bbls.	pork, "	14,250	"
76 bbls. } 200 kegs }	lard, "	24,924	"
73 hhds. } 48 bbls. }	tallow, "	96,177	"
75 "	pot ashes, "	41,214	"
30 "	apples,
6 M	W. O. staves,
752 bales	cotton, weighing	300,366	"
760 bbls.	rosin, "	4285,000	"
		2,505,151	lbs.

Of this large cargo of American produce, weighing more than two millions five hundred thousand pounds, all but the cotton and rosin is believed to be from the state of New York. This trade must be worth as much rs half of Oregon to us.—N. Y. Jour. Com.

☞ There have been coined at the United States Branch Mint, at New Orleans, from the first of January to the 31st of October, 1845, coins of the following denominations and aggregate value:

Eagles	43,500
Half-eagles	37000
Half-dollars	1,660,000
Dimes	230,000
Value of gold	$920,000
" silver	853,000
Total	$1,473,000

The amount of coinage during the year 1843, was a little more than $3,000,000 over the amount above named, and during the year 1844 a little less than $3,000,000 more than during the present year. The decreased amount of coinage is owing to the fact of the foreign exchange being against New Orleans in the early part of the season.

The facetious Mr. Murray, of the Edinburg Theatre, set the modern Athenians in a roar, one night, lately, with a new reading of the air-drawn dagger apostrophe of Macbeth:

Is that a Railway that I see before me,
The Premium toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:—
I have thee not, and yet I see thee still:
Hast thou, then, no Provisional Committee—
And but a Railway of the mind: a false creation
Proceeding from the scrip-oppressed brain?
I see the yet, in shares as palpable
As the Glenmutchkins, [great applause] and now with Equalizing calls for present payment.
Which was not so before. That's quite another thing.

☞ A Capital story is told of a "mistake of the printer" in the Baltimore Argus. A merchant employed an engraver to cut a plate for a business card; the plate was sent to the printer, who worked off 500 cards and it was then returned to the engraver, who, at a glance, discovered two C.'s where there should have been but one. Without delay, he altered the plate, taking out the extra C. This was just accomplished when the clerk of the merchant called with one of the cards, and pointed out the error to the engraver, who appeared much surprised, and at once produced the the plate on which the cards had been printed. This not having on it the extra C, it was at once decided that it was a mistake of the printer. The story is not without a moral.

Franklin's mode of lending Money.

"I send you, herewith, a bill of ten louis-d'ours I do not pretend to give you so much; I only lend it to you. When you return to your country, you cannot fail of getting into some business that will, in time, enable you to pay all your debts. In that case when you meet another honest man in similar distress, you will pay me by lending this money to him, enjoining him to discharge the debt by a like operation when he shall be able, and shall meet with such another opportunity. I hope it may thus pass through many hands before it meets with a knave to stop its progress. This is a trick of mine to do a great deal of good with a little money. I am not rich enough to afford much in good works, and so am obliged to be cunning, and make the most of a little."

How to Write for Newspapers.

1.—Have something to write about.
2.—Write plain; dot your i's; cross your t's; point your sentences; begin them with capitals.
3.—Write short; to the point; stop when you have done.
4.—Read it over; abridge and correct it, until you get it into the shortest space possible.
5.—Pay the Postage.

These rules observed will always ensure the publication of an article, and what is more desirable to the writer, will secure its being read.—Bost. Times.

Truth.

A parent may leave an estate to his son, but how soon may it be mortgazed! He may leave him money, but how soon may it be squandered. Better leave him a sound constitution, habits of industry, an unblemished reputation, a good education, and an inward abhorrence of vice, in any shape or form; these cannot be wrested from him, and are better than thousands of gold and silver.

☞ The ladies' anti-slavery fair, in Boston, will open at Faneuil Hall, on Tuesday evening next.—Won't it be a funny affair?

☞ Ex-Governor Call, of Florida, has presented to Governor Mosely a specimen of Florida hemp, made from a plant known as "bear grass." It is said to equal Manilla hemp. The ex-Governor predicts that this hemp will be more profitable than the northern, and as valuable as cotton.

☞ The Cincinnati firemen are getting civilized Beginning to fight.

☞ McKendree College, located at Lebanon, Ill., has suspended its operations, in consequence of pecuniary embarrassments. It was under the patronage of the Methodist church.

THE MARKET.

OFFICE OF THE JOURNAL AND AGE,
Thursday morning, Dec. 25,

The expectations we indulged at last report, of increased activity in business, to result from resumption of navigation, were grievously disappointed. The rivers were scarcely well opened until the temperature turned to extreme cold, and navigation was suspended on the very beginning, and business stopped short. Several of the boats that left our port were caught on the passage to Cincinnati, and compelled to lie by for a return of moderate weather.

ALE.—Prices remain as at last report—$7,00. inclusive of bbl.

ASHES.—Pots are dull of sale at 2¾c.@3¼c.—Scorched Salts 2¾@3c. Some transactions in trade at 3 cents.

BUTTER—Is as we left it last week. Keg is worth 10¼ from wagon, and 10¼@11c. from store. Roll is active at 12@12½c. from first hands—we note sales at 13c. from store.

BACON.—New bacon is hardly in the market, and old does not require quotations. The asking rate of new is, Hog round 7c, Hams 8c., Sides 7c., and Shoulders 6½c. Bulk is offered at 6c., without a buyer.

BEANS.—White or Navy beans are in active request and eagerly bought up at $1,12@$1,25 from wagon, and first quality will command $1,31 from store. The supply is light.

BEESWAX.—The small lots arriving are taken readily at 27c.

CHEESE.—We find no change in this article since our last, unless it be in diminished receipts. Prices are without change. From wagon 7@7¼c., from store 7½, 7¾@8c. Stock light.

CRACKERS.—The advance reported some two weeks back is maintained. We quote Water at $1,00; Butter $4,75; Pilot bread $3,50; Sugar and Soda crackers 7½c ℔ lb.

DRIED FRUIT.—Dry Apples continue in active request; sales during the week from wagon have been made at $1,40 up to $1,62 ℔ bushel; and from store sales at $1,62@$1,75. An offer of $1,65 for 800 bushels in store was refused, $1,75 asked.

Dry Peaches.—Small sales at $3,50, from store.

FLOUR.—The receipts of Flour are so light as to give the seller the advantage of the market.—Buyers have been compelled to take up all that offers to meet their home demand, and prices have ruled at $4,37@$5,00 for good brands, during the last four days. Yesterday, we witnessed several sales, and all at $5,00. One or two loads of Extra sold for a shade over $5,00. Retail sales at $5,12@$5,25. For extra $5,37 and even $5,50. We are so completely shut out of market that the depression of prices Eastward has not affected us at all.

Buckwheat Flour is worth $1,75 to $2,00 ℔ 100 lbs.

FISH.—No change in any description, and we refer to our table of prices for quotations.

FEATHERS.—No transactions beyond a mere retail trade at quotations.

GRAIN.—Wheat—We continue to quote at 90c., but it ought to be added that at the mills in Allegheny 90@95c. ℔ bushel is given.

Barley is less sought for, but still commands 65 to 75c., as in quality—the higher figure being given only for prime grain.

Rye.—Ready sale at 53c., and we are informed that at Voegley's mill 60c. has been paid for prime Rye. Very little coming in.

Oats.—Sales at 35c., generally. 37½c. is asked for lots, but we hear of no sale higher than 35.—At retail 37½c. is paid, and some holders ask 40c., but without buyers.

Corn.—Sales small at 45c., and from store 50c.

HOPS.—We do not find that buyers will come up to the nominal rates, yet we have no authority to alter them. There are very few in market.

HAY.—Sales of good at the scales at $17½@18½. Baled from store at $17.

IRON NAILS AND STEEL.—Juniata Common bar 3½c cash, 3¾c on time. Boiled and puddled bar 3c cash, 3¼c time.

Juniata Nails.—10 to 20.d, 4¼c. Puddled and boiled nails 4c.

Steel.—Spring 5¾ to 6¼. Am Blister 4¾ @ 5¼.

Blooms.—No sales, we quote still at $70 ℔ ton, for good Juniata.

Pig Metal.—We have still to report nothing doing, owing to suspension of receipts. 3 tons of Allegheny No. 1, received by wagon sold at $32 cash; 25 tons canal metal of good quality, sold to go out of the market, and stopped here by ice, resold yesterday at $31 cash.

LARD.—No sales of moment, our figures represent the true state of the market.

MOLASSES.—There is a nominal rate for this article, which we give, say 40c, but the price would not command any quality. Until the river opens, any one may fix the value of Molasses, as there is no stock to operate on. Sugar House 41c.

PORK—Little doing. The packers have taken up no new lots this week. Butchers give 4¼ to 4¾ for fat slaughtered Hogs Arrivals light.

SALT.—Nothing doing beyond a retail business the single bbl. at $1,10 @ $1,12.

SEEDS.—Clover sales from wagon at $5,50, from store at $5,62, and to a small extent at $6,00.—Holders generally ask $6,00.

Timothy—Dealers pay to wagons $2,50 @ $2,75, and sell from store at $3,00, in a retail way.

Flax—Sales at $1,00 to $1,05.

SUGAR—No change in price. The stock is extremely light, and receipts are excluded, but there is yet no disposition to advance in the market. New is worth 6½ @ 6¾; prime old 7 @ 7¼.

WHISKEY—Common is worth 26 to 27c as at last report, very little arriving. Rectified 26 and 27c firm.

WOOL.—No receipts of moment, our lasi quotations are repeated say prime 33; full blood, 30; ⅝ do. 29, (to be 'clean, light, and free from burs;) ¾ do. 27c; ½ do. 25c; ¼ do. 24c; common 22 @ 23c. Tub washed, 24c.

LOCAL NEWS.

QUARTER SESSIONS—Present, Judges Patton, Porter and Kerr.—The counsel made eloquent speches in summing up and closing the argument in the case of the Com. vs. Rook and Crumlish. The case was then submitted to the Jury, who retired for consultation.

The case of the Com. vs. Benjamin Hibler—for-nication and bastardy, was then postponed until March Term.

Mrs. Byers then appeared and made a complaint against her husband, for ill-treatment of her. The defendant acknowledged the offence, but said he would do better in future. This would not satisfy the lady, and the man was remanded to prison. He is a laboring man and an Irishman, and behaved himself tolerably well when sober. In spite of all the poor fellow's protestations, and promises, the wife refused all reconciliation. She said she had six children, and was determined to support them herself.

The case of Surety of the Peace, Com. vs. C. Michael, was then called. The private prosecutor was K. Himes; and the parties had been working in partnership at Fresco Painting. They quarrelled for some reason or other, when, as the prosecutor said, Michael threatened to "stick him troo and troo wid a knife." The defendant was required to enter bail to keep the peace. McMahon for prosecution; Eyster for defence

The Jury in the case of the Com. vs. Rook and Crumlish, came into Court with a verdict of guilty against the defendants; but recommending them to the mercy of the Court.

The Court then discharged the Jurors until next Monday week.

The Grand Jury returned several true bills.

After the transaction of some unimportant business, the Court adjourned over until Friday.

DISTRICT COURT—Judge Grier, Presiding.—The case of Woods vs. Woods, occupied the attention of the Court during the entire day.

The Jury returned a verdict in the afternoon in favor of the plaintiff; when the Court adjourned over until Friday, when the argument list and chancery cases will be taken up.

ANOTHER DEATH IN THE HOSPITAL.—A man by the name of RAYMOND, died on Monday in the Small Pox hospital, of this city. The circumstances attending his death are sad enough. It appears that he was engaged to be married to a young lady in this city; and in fact, the day appointed for the ceremony to be performed, when the bride was taken suddenly ill, with a sickness, which finally proved to be the Small pox. The nuptials had, of course, to be postponed; and during her sickness, Mr. R. watched by her bedside, with the most devoted tenderness. His affectionate care, however, cost him his life, for in her sick chamber, he contracted the same terrible disease. He was taken to the hospital, where, notwithstanding every exertion made to save him, he died on Monday last. Mr. Raymond was from Harrisburgh, in this State. We understand that the young lady is recovering.

TO-DAY.—When the little children of the poor meet you in the street to-day, and salute you with "Christmas Gift!" don't look cross at them; don't pass on unheeding; but hand out your small change. If they have ever so little money, they will be happy: do not then grudge them a share of yours; but if you have a spare coin in your pocket, chase it up into a corner, and give it to the first ragged urchin you meet. How happy it will make him! Who so happy as he! Why, the son of the wealthiest will not fire off his crackers with more animation, or laugh with more uproarious merriment than the sturdy little recipient of our "bit."

A RIOT.—The proprietor of one of our most respectable coffee houses entered a complaint yesterday before the Mayor, against several persons, for riotous conduct in his house, on Tuesday night. They were held to bail.

POLICE.—Wednesday Morning.—There were two cases before his Honor yesterday morning. Both the offenders were sent to the hill.

ALLEGHENY POLICE.—There was no case before his Honor yesterday morning.

THE THEATRE.—It will be seen that the managers open the Theatre to-night, with a very attractive bill.

NOMINATION.—Mr. Howard was yesterday unanimously nominated by the Whig and Antimasonic city convention for the office of mayor.

Messrs. Chapman and Perkins were nominated for Directors of the Poor.

ALLEGHENY MAYORALTY.—R. Cassatt Esq., was nominated for the office of Mayor of Allegheny last night? by the Whig city convention.

Rail Road Meeting.

The citizens of Lawrenceville met at the Temperance Hall, on Tuesday evening the 23d inst., to take into consideration the subject of the right of way for the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road, when on motion, STEPHEN H. SARBER, Esq., was called to the Chair; J. D. Moreland was chosen Vice President, and John H. M'Kee, appointed Secretary.

On motion of Wm. Larimer, Jr.; a Committee of five were appointed to submit resolutions to the meeting; the Chair appointed Wm. Larimer, jr., Robt. Wallace Dr. J. Robinson, Wm. Anghinbaugh, and James Trimble.

The Committee through their Chairman submitted the following preamble and resolutions, which were unanimously adopted.

Whereas, The citizens of Lawrenceville have long watched with deep interest, the various discussions and proceedings in relation to the grant of the "right of way" to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company to the city of Pittsburgh.

And Whereas, We have been convinced from a careful consideration of the whole matter, that to drive that company, by unwise legislation, to the Ohio River, at any point west of Pennsylvania, would be injurious, not only to Pittsburgh, but to the State at large, and to our public works, by diverting along that new route, much of that travel and transportation that must otherwise come to Pittsburgh.

And Whereas, We, residing in the immediate vicinity of the United States Arsenal, having had our attention drawn to the military aspect of the question would desire to invite the serious consideration of our patriotic and high spirited legislators to that aspect of the case.

We have already a Railroad from the seat of our national Government, by the way of the Armory at Harper's Ferry, to Cumberland, and the completion of that Railroad to Pittsburgh, and the extension of other railroads hence to Cleveland, and our noble harbor at Erie, would connect in one continuous line.—Our seat of National Government—our Armory at Harper's Ferry—our arsenal and cannon foundry at this place—with our two excellent harbors on Lake Erie, and would thus enable government in a few days to concentrate any number of men, and any amount of arms and ammunition, at Washington city, at Baltimore, at the head of the Ohio River, or at Erie or Cleveland.

Pittsburgh too, seems destined to be the great manufactory of Steam Ships, from whence they may be forwarded in detached pieces by two routes, to Lake Erie and to the Gulf of Mexico; surely then, it is difficult to conceive a line of improvement more important and desirable as a national work, than one from Washington City by way of Harper's Ferry and Pittsburgh to the Lake, at Erie and Cleveland, and we do hope that our wise and patriotic legislators, will not by refusing to permit the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company to expend millions of their money among our citizens, put a veto upon this improvement, so important in a national point of view.

Resolved, therefore, as the sense of this meeting, that we cannot belive, the wise and patriotic legislators of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, will by refusing to grant the "right of way," deprive their fellow citizens of this improvement, and force all its advantages upon the citizens of another State, break the most important line of military communication between the national seat of Government, the national armory at Harper's Ferry, the national arsenal and the Iron Ship Yard at Pittsburgh, and the national Lake port at Erie, and perhaps find within a few years that their conduct has greatly crippled our government in its assertions against a more formidable enemy.

Resolved, That the above preamble and resolutions be published in all the Pittsburgh papers, and that a copy of the same, signed by the officers, be presented to the Governor and each branch of the Legislature.

Resolved, That we recommend every district in this county to hold meetings in favor of the right of way for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

The following named persons were appointed a committee to procure signatures to a petition to the Legislature for the right of way:

Stephen H. Sarber, A. J. Scott,
James Elser, J. D. Moreland.

S. H. SARBER, Pres't.
J. D. MORELAND, V. P.
JOHN H. MCKEE, Secretary.

River Matters.

☞ Navigation is suspended for the present.

☞ The steamer Hibernia, Capt. Klinefelter, arrived at Cincinnati on the 21st, from this city.—She left the steamer Robert Morris at New R'chmond, 21 miles above Cincinnati. We learn from a letter received last evening that the river was falling very fast and full of floating ice.

☞ The steamer Jamestown has just been completed at Cincinnati. We take the following particulars from the Gazette:—"The Jamestown is 650 tons burthen—her length, 180 feet, 36 feet beam, 28 feet floor, and 8 feet hold. She is propelled by two engines, 9 feet stroke, and 24 inch cylinder, and her machinery arranged with express regard to the safety of the crew. The berths of the crew look more comfortable than usual. We are glad to note this.

The following citizens were employed in building and finishing this boat:

Hull, built by.....Burton Hazen.
Engines, " .....David Griffey.
Cabin, " .....Robert Canfield.

The Jamestown is owned and commanded by Capt. D. Whitten, W. F. Hamilton, Clerk, and John W. Owens.

☞ We find the following memoranda in the Cincinnati Gazette of the 22d, it will no doubt be interesting to some of our readers.

Memoranda from the Manifest of the Star Spangled Baaner.—Left New Orleans December 9th: passed the Queen of the West at Island 65, unable to get up; met the Champion at same, passed Andrew Jackson aground at St. Francis' Bar; Mail and Oregon below President's Island, Alhambra [on the 14th] above Randolph; Jno Hancock at No. 40, Gadmus and Selita below New Madrid, James Madison at Cairo, met Queen City and Ft. Wayne at Shawneetown, Diadem and Gen. Pike at Evansville, and Sea at French Island.

FIRE PROOF ROOFING.—The subscriber is now prepared to execute orders for Beacon's Patent Composition Fire Proof Roofing, at a cost considerably less than the ordinary Shingle Roofing, and warrant it for five years, a specimen of which can be seen at the corner of Front, at Mr. Varner's Hotel. This composition is far preferable to metalic roofing, as it is a non-conductor of heat—nothing in its composition that will corrode—of great durability—it will last as long as the walls of the building, and can be afforded for one half of the cost for any metalic used for the above purpose.

The article is supereeding almost entirely every other method of roofing in some of the Eastern cities, and only wants to be known for its general adoption.

L. E. BACKUS.

A few testimonials of its merits are subjoined:—

NEWARK, N. J., May 16, 1845.

Some three or four years since we had the Zinc roofing taken off our building, and Mr. Bacon covered them with his Composition Roofing, which answered an excellent purpose for over two years, and until the buildings were destroyed by fire; at which time it was observed that they stood the fire extremely well, did not conduct it, and in fact did not consume as fast as the boards or planks upon which the Composition was laid.

Our buildings have been rebuilt within the last year, and they are entirely covered with the said Composition, although of a widow, children, friends or creditors; and it will be seen on an examination of the table of rates of the life insurance, which will be furnished by the subscriber to all who may feel an interest in the subject, that by paying a small sum to the office every year during his life, a person may secure to his family a very considerable amount at his decease.

Wherever the system of Life Insurance is properly understood, it is extensively adopted, and its great advantages to all, but more especially to those who depend on their own exertions for the support of their families, or who may be desirous to secure the payment of a sum of money to their friends, creditors or children, at their decease, which they might be otherwise unable to accomplish, that the operation of the system needs but to be explained to ensure the serious consideration of the public.

In several instances it has happened that the party insured has died shortly after, having paid only one or two instalments of the premium, when his family have received from this office the full amount for which he had insured.

Full information on this important subject may be obtained by applying, personally, or by letter (post-paid) at the office of the subscriber, the authorised agent of the Girard Life Insurance Company.

Since the fire in the Messrs. Hedenburg & Son's buildings, an alarming fire broke out of a large building adjacent to Mr. J. M. Quinby's factory buildings, under insurance by this Company, which were much exposed; one of them with the composition Roof, was in danger of being consumed in a few minutes, and the roof escaped injury, while many of its windows and some of its doors were destroyed.

From my observation and the opinion expressed either by persons who have taken pains to inform themselves with respect to Mr. Simeon Bacon, Jr.'s composition, I am convinced that it is equal, if not superior to zinc for roofing.

W. A. MYER, President.

To all whom it may concern, this is so certify that I have had one of Mr. Bacon's composition Roofs in use for two or three years past, and am well pleased with it. I tried it in the first place on one of my workshops, and after giving it a fair trial, I had the zinc roofs taken off of the rest of my factory, and this composition put on, and find it to answer much better, and I cordially recommend it to public favor.

J. M. QUINBY.
NEWARK, May 12, 1845.

This is to certify that I have had one of Mr. Bacon's Composition Roofs on my shop for the last year, and, as far as my experience goes, would recommend it to general use. M. GOULD.
NEWARK, May 16, 1845.

Being well assured, upon particular enquiry, that Bacon's Composition Roofing is in all respects preferable to tin, we have adopted this method of covering our manufactories, Hope Buildings, No. 2, which are 125 by 30 feet.

Autumn's Warning.

I HAVE come, I have come, to lay bare the green trees
And to sweep through the fields with my turbulent breeze;
I have crossed the strip bridges while rushing along,
And to silence the note of the warbling song.
I have come with my mist and my cold falling dew,
To tell you that winter will soon be in view.
I have come to give warning that all ought to wear
The new style of GUMS that excludes the damp air.

I mention these articles because I know well,
That none in the city their beauty excel;
I'll venture to say that in all the trade round,
Such durable articles there can be found.
These GUMS, you will find, are sure to resist
The cold blowing breeze and the chill Autumn mist.

My breezes may blow and my vapors may fall,
But the mineralized GUM is sure to stand all.
You'll never have cause to regret what you've done,
In purchasing shoes made of Mineralized Gum.
Then take my advice, and wear the Gum shoes;
And remember, it is the true Autumn news.

FORTY YEARS EXPERIENCE, will enable me to execute any orders I may be favored with, for every description of silver plated, brass, japanned and tinned saddlery, carriage and harness trimmings. Also—house door plating: such as name plates, bell pulleys, number plates, door locks, knobs, astricals, &c., either of silver, brass or composition, door knockers, or name plates, from $1,50 to $5, each.

Wanted Immediately—1 first-rate Silverplater, at house work; 1 first-rate Blacksmith, by piece work, 1 first-rate Blacksmith to make iron Hames by piece work; 1 good hand at making wood Hames.

Wanted to Purchase—1 good Lathe for turning brass work, price about $30. Wanted to rent, a good house and shop, for manufacturing purposes.

I may be found at present at the Beaver House, Second street.

N. B. I would have no objections to be connected with a Hardware Merchant, as I believe I can furnish the above named articles as low as they are made in any city in the United States. An interview may be had, and further information given. GEORGE THARP, Silverplater.

FROM FIFTY TO ONE HUNDRED LOTS IN ALLEGHENY CITY, FOR SALE.—The undersigned offers for sale, on accomodating terms, from fifty to one hundred lots in Allegheny city, the titles to which are indisputable. These lots are twenty four feet in front, running back from eighty to one hundred and forty feet, except the corner lots, which vary from one hundred to upwards of two hundred feet front. They are pleasantly situated in the First Ward, on the bank of the Ohio river, comprising the only portion of Allegheny City suitable for a good Steamboat, or Ferry landing, and are well calculated for residences, extensive Manufacturing establishments, or other purposes. The Omnibus from the bridge and the Stage for Beaver pass the property, daily, the former at short intervals, and Coal can be procured from the opposite side of the Ohio, at any season of the year. Manufacturers can obtain the quantity of ground necessary, upon very reasonable terms, and will find it to possess peculiar advantages for such purposes. Mechanics, river men and others will find it an excellent location for the erection of dwellings. A plot of ground can be seen and further information obtained by calling upon the subscribers, on the premises.
